Constable Mike Bradley, who is well-known in the area as a former Red Hawks football player who went on to the CFL, recently saved the life of an Oshawa toddler while working earlier this month. Bradley is seen here with Hank, his two-year-old German shepherd on the shoreline of his parents' property. He has been with the Durham Regional Police Service for five years after a six-year career with the Edmonton Eskimos.

Speed served him well on the field and has now served up a miracle on a subdivision city street.

Haliburton's Mike Bradley, who is a Durham

Regional Police constable, used his speed and quick thinking to not only get to, but use CPR on, 22-month-old Eyston Brandauer earlier this month.

"It was pretty surreal to say the least. In our job being a police officer we try to not get emotionally attached to the calls, but that was one of the kind of calls where if you weren't emotionally attached there's something wrong," he said in an interview with the paper.

The married father of an 18-month-old said all he could think of was his own daughter when he heard dispatch with the call of a choking toddler. This past Wednesday he returned to see how

Woman charged with impaired driving

A Waterloo woman was charged with impaired driving after being stopped by the Bancroft OPP on Highway 28 in Highlands East.

Police were responding to a call Aug. 20 from the Apsley area.

The 55-year-old woman was arrested and taken to the Bancroft OPP detachment. She will appear in court on Sept. 25 to face charges.

Several thefts reported

Two thefts were reported to Bancroft OPP from the Highlands East area recently.

On Tuesday, Aug. 21, a wooden utility trailer was reported stolen to the police from a home on Highway 28.

On Friday, Aug. 24, bear-proof garbage cans were reported stolen from the Paudash beach area on Highway 118 in Highlands East.

Anyone with information about these thefts are encouraged to contact the Bancroft OPP at 613-332-2112 or Crimestoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

Slippery when wet

Dysart fire department's captain Rod Consack with help from firefighter Greg Phippen clear the road of sand and oil raised by the light rain on Kennisis Lake Road on Monday afternoon. Two vehicles slid off the road, going in opposite directions, but the commercial vehicle managed to drive out of the ditch while the passenger car needed the assistance of a tow truck. The OPP, EMS and fire department were on the scene. The road was closed from Marigold Road to close to seven kilometres north until 6:30 p.m. that day.

School looking for new building projects

Fleming College is seeking expressions of interest from organizations or individuals interested in partnering with the 2013 sustainable building design and construction program in the construction of a sustainable building.

The sustainable building design and construction program aims to give students the opportunity to design and construct using a wide variety of sustainable building materials and systems and to provide our clients with the healthiest, most energy efficient and aesthetically pleasing building as possible.

In order to best meet the needs of both the class and the client, the following criteria has been established to allow potential clients to determine their compatibility with the program and for the college to judge suitability of the project.

- Property for the project must be owned by the client.
- Property zoned appropriately.
- Preliminary exploration of permits complete
- Partners must demonstrate the financial ability to undertake the project. Partners will cover the costs for all consultant fees, permits, construction materials and trades required for the project, as per the budget agreed to by the program and the owner.
- The building must incorporate a wide range of sustainable features, including the use of natural and/or recycled construction materials, the use of renewable energy sources, the use of healthy water collection and waste disposal methods, and the use of healthy fixtures and finishes.

- Property location.
- Although private projects will be considered, priority will be given to projects for not-for-profit agencies or public institutions or to projects that are otherwise open to the public.
- Building size must not exceed 1,500 square feet.

If you or your organization is interested in having a sustainable building constructed as part of the 2013 (April through August) sustainable building design and construction program, please provide a letter of interest to:

Ted Brandon, training officer, Fleming College, PO Box 839, Haliburton, Ontario, K0M 1S0

Your letter of interest should address each of the criteria outlined above. The deadline for letters of interest is September 14, 2012. For more information visit Fleming's website at www.flemingcollege.com or contact Ted Brandon at 705-457-1680 or tbrandon@flemingc.on.ca

Streetscape project on final stretch

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

As the cottage season winds down, Haliburton residents can prepare themselves for a whole new level of chaos on the main street.

After a two-month hiatus, the Highland streetscape project is gearing up again, with a start date of Sept. 4, says Brian Nicholson, municipal public works director.

Started in October 2011, the project aims to beautify the downtown core through many infrastructure changes.

This past August, Dysart council awarded a contract to Fowler Construction, which will be completing the last leg of work.

The project will revamp Highland Street from Cedar Avenue to Maple Avenue.

Up to now the project has been flowing seamlessly, a trend Nicholson hopes to continue.

"The project is dead on right now. From a dollars and cents perspective the tenders came in well so we're looking very good. If Fowler's can maintain the schedule they've put forth we'll be in just excellent shape," said Nicholson.

Seamless or not, the next phase of the project will be quite messy, literally.

"This is the big part of it. This is the dirtiest, messiest portion. This is the piece nobody likes to see, but we have to look through that and be positive," said Nicholson.

Work completed by Fowler will include the removal of sidewalk/curb and asphalt from the roadway and the installation of new curbs, new roadway asphalt and concrete pavers, the latter of which was done on York Street.

While a completion date hasn't been carved in stone, Nicholson said the bulk of work will be done by mid-November, with a few final details to be completed in spring of 2013.

"That's all weather dependent and if equipment doesn't break down. There's so many variables but that's the goal," he said.

Aspects like landscaping work will most likely be done in the spring, said the director.

Apart from finishing on time and on budget, Nicholson is focused on keeping the lines of communication with downtown businesses and the public open.

"The No. 1 thing in this project right now from my perspective is making sure we're communicating with, in particular, the storefronts so they know what to expect."

Joanne Sharpley of Sharpley's Source for Sports said to date the municipality has been good at communicating their plans and they look good.

Luke Schell, owner of The Photo Shop and president of the Business Improvement Area, has been staying positive about the project and hopes other merchants are adopting the same outlook.

For Schell, a negative attitude only hurts the village as a whole.

"By being negative you're only convincing people not to come to Haliburton and Haliburton doesn't need that," he said.

Moving forward, Schell hopes the municipality continues to communicate well with downtown businesses, but understands they don't always know what's happening on a day-to-day basis.

Up until now the shop owner has been pleasantly surprised at how non-disruptive the whole project has been.

"They're saying by the time the Santa Claus parade comes it will be on a new street," said Schell.

The BIA president is looking forward to the end result, as are other business owners.

Earl Cox and his wife Cindy have owned the ladies' clothing store Cindy's on Highland Street for the past six years.

The project will be a big improvement to the way downtown appears, said Earl.

"I think the interlocking stones on the main street is going to be nice. I thought it was all a great idea," he said.

Earl believes the summer hiatus was a wise decision by the municipality and isn't too concerned looking ahead to the construction's start-up.

"They have to do it sometime and all it's going to do is improve next summer's business."

Police urge lifejacket use after man drowns

Chad Ingram
Staff reporter

A Thornhill man drowned in Lake Kashagawigamog last week.

According to the OPP, Ayreh Aaron Wise, 33, was kayaking when the boat overturned.

Wise was not wearing a lifejacket, police said.

Police, EMS workers and firefighters responded to a 911 call about 2:40 p.m.

That call was made by Dysart et al Reeve and County Warden Murray Fearrey.

Fearrey was at home along Lake Kashagawigamog Road when Peter Varty, a resident from across the lake, came rapping on his door.

Emergency crews used Fearrey's property to access the water.

"I directed traffic," Fearrey said. "It was nothing."

The paper was unable to get a hold of Peter, but did speak with his wife, Ann.

"We just heard calls," she said, explaining that Varty and a neighbouring cottager had jumped in a boat and headed out into the lake to see what the problem was.

Ann wasn't sure where in the lake they'd encountered Wise.

"It was very traumatic [for the family]," she said. "I think

It makes you wonder why anybody, whether they can swim or not, would go out in a boat without a lifejacket.

— Reeve and County Warden Murray Fearrey

the bottom line is wear your lifejacket."

Fearrey expressed similar sentiments.

"It was difficult to see it," he said. "It makes you wonder why anybody, whether they can swim or not, would go out in a boat without a lifejacket."

Crews performed CPR and Wise was taken to the Haliburton hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Of the 23 people who drowned operating a vessel in Ontario in 2010, 22 of them, or 96 per cent, were not wearing lifejackets.

OPP are stressing the importance of wearing floatation devices.

Community celebrates CF-100 restoration

Darren Lum

She's alive and looking like new.

It's probably a little politically incorrect to affix any gender to a plane, but for the iconic Avro Canada CF-100 Canuck in Haliburton it fits, as she has given birth to an effort to honour the men and women who have served (and continue to serve) in the Canadian Forces.

A crowd of more than a hundred people gathered at the base of the plane for a ceremony on Tuesday, Aug. 28 to acknowledge the refurbishment efforts.

The event included special guests such as veterans of past wars and conflicts, Legion zone commander Belinda Wilson, pastor Bev Hicks, Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey, Sinclair Russell, who is brother to Haliburton County's only Canadian Forces colonel, Colonel Neil Russell, and Rex Sutcliffe a pilot with the Royal Canadian Air Force who flew the exact plane on the pedestal.

Chester Howse and Legion branch 129 president Carla Watson spent more than a year on the project. They held fundraising events and asked around for money.

Two large donations, one from an anonymous donor and a subsequent one from a man from England, were helpful in this endeavour, Howse said. There were close to $56,000 in donations. Initially the project's goal was $89,000 to take the plane down in pieces and do the work down south.

Howse, project co-ordinator, was pleased about achieving his goal and thanked the community, Fearrey, Kashaga Paint and Heritage Metal Restoration, who made a proposal to reduce the final cost of the project.

"I think it looks beautiful. [Kashaga Paint Design and Heritage Metal Restoration] have done a great job. We got it done without any tax dollars I'm proud to say. Really thankful to our two anonymous donors, plus all of you people in Haliburton County who donated to this," he said.

Howse said John Lally of Pinestone Resort helped to put fundraising over the top by hosting a golf tournament in July.

"We're happy - happy that we've reached this point. There were a couple of hiccups along the way, but we persevered and sang a few hallelujahs and got it done," he said.

Landscaping work and lights around the base of the pedestal are next.

Fearrey still remembers the initial efforts to bring the plane to Haliburton. He recognized people like Wayne Wood and Les Roberts for their work bringing it in 1973. He said Howse was a leader in the project with his persistence and determination.

Sutcliffe, 78, of Oakville learned through his logbook that he piloted the same jet sitting on the pedestal in British Columbia on Dec. 19, 1959.

"In a way it's still going strong and so am I," he said.

He flew the jet when he was 23 and was glad to see his plane returned to its former glory. The amiable man, who described the plane as "dependable," flew close to 1,000 hours during a little more than three years in the 409 squadron. His claim to fame, he said, was taking the jet up to 50,000 feet.

"I can tell you at 50,000 feet the high speed and the stalling speed were two or three knots different," he said.

Sutcliffe came with his navigator Don Corker, who told his friend about the plane a few years ago. Although Corker didn't fly this exact plane, he was still proud of Haliburton's achievement to preserve history so dear to him.

Sinclair Russell of Carnarvon came on behalf of his brother Colonel W. Neil Russell, who was at the first ceremony for the plane.

Russell pointed out his older brother, who was raised in Carnarvon and born in Minden, but lives in London, Ont., is the only person from Haliburton County to earn the rank of colonel in the Canadian Forces. He served the Forces for 33 years. Legion Zone 4 deputy commander Wilson has seen the ups and downs of the project and pointed to what the Royal Canadian Air Force fighter pilot Rex Sutcliffe, 78, came to the re-dedication ceremony for the iconic Haliburton CF-100 fighter jet on Aug. 28. Sutcliffe, who lives in Oakville, said he flew the plane when he was 23 years old.

Special guests including veterans of past conflicts were given seats closest to the newly refurbished Avro Canada CF-100 Canuck fighter jet during the re-dedication ceremony.

plane symbolizes.

"This is a tribute to the community. It's a tribute to the branch. It's a tribute to everyone and to all our fighting men and women," she said. "And, again, it's just a real pleasure to be here and witness today. I thank Carla for the invitation. I just want to know who is the hotshot was that landed the sucker?"

The Haliburton Legion branch purchased the plane in February 1973. It served during the Cold War on NATO bases in Europe and as part of NORAD. There was 692 CF-100 aircraft produced by Avro Canada. It was the only Canadian-designed fighter jet to enter mass production. There are only 27 other aircraft on display across the country.

Ev Stata sits on the couch looking forward as the music plays outside for the 25th anniversary celebration for the Parklane Apartments.

She and Leata Mott are the two original residents.

Stata said the apartment has always been a place of smiles and laughter.

She has seen a lot of people come and go in her 25 years (including her husband for the first 10 before he died) living at the Parklane Apartments, but what remained is the fun and the friendships.

There are 50 units with 62 residents living in the apartments.

Many attended with friends and family to celebrate with a barbecue, cake, refreshments and music by Gord Kidd, Northern Jam and the Country String Dusters. Hali's Bistro cooks prepared the hotdogs and hamburgers.

The Parklane Residents' Association organized the event that celebrated its former and current residents.

It was an initiative led by the Haliburton Legion, branch 129.

Legion members Earl Shipley and Don Johnston got the idea from speaking to members of the Cobourg Legion.

Sylvia Sisson, Legion president, asked a committee to be formed to oversee the project.

The members were Cliff Dawson, Holly Sisson, Dr. Harry Good, Jan Shipley, Bruce MacKay, Murray Fearrey, Wayne Wood, Earl Shipley and Don Johnston.

It had its official opening Oct. 3, 1987.

To go or to stay?

GROWING UP in the small southwestern Ontario town of Wiarton, I couldn't wait to get out and see the world.

Part of youth culture was to day-dream of the city; envision living in a condo on Front Street in Toronto, going to coffee shops and attending concerts and generally being urban.

To endeavour to stay was frowned upon.

And the older you got, the more moving made sense.

Want to go to university or college? You'll need to go to the city.

Want to find a good paying job? Far more of those in the city, too.

These cultural norms nearly expel young people from small towns, draining rural areas of new ideas, young workers and families that can grow an economy.

They also jeopardize the success of rural youth.

According to a backgrounder by TYPs (Town Youth Participation Strategies), at least 40 per cent of homeless youth in cities have migrated there from rural Canada.

For those who don't end up homeless, there is the heavy burden of postsecondary education debt (sitting at an average of $37,000 per student in Ontario) that makes moving back to their hometowns much harder.

A new study of rural youth is examining the issues related to leaving small towns for bigger cities and what happens to those who run into problems along the way.

It is important to our community and the thousands of others like it across the country.

And it just happens to be conducted by this county's own Dr. Fay Martin, a researcher with a background in social work.

Martin is putting together one of the few studies of rural homelessness – a field normally dominated by the urban lens – called To Go or to Stay?

The results will be wide-ranging and potentially groundbreaking for the Haliburton Highlands.

In it, 60 youth will reflect on why they left or stayed and what could have been better for them along the way – information our county, businesses, educators, citizens and government alike, can reflect on.

The culture of leaving is alive and well amongst Haliburton's youth.

Perhaps Martin's study can be a first step in getting them back.

(To Go or to Stay? is looking for participants. See story on page 8.)

Call of the riled

EVERY NOW and then, we hunters examine the products we've bought and think about the implications of actually using them.

It doesn't happen too often. In fact, the last time I can remember going through the process, I was single and just about to open up a bottle of skunk cover scent.

Now, as I look upon the bear call that sits in front of me, that feeling has returned.

The problem is the end result goes against everything evolution has taught us – this thing is designed to bring bears closer.

Essentially, you sit in the wilderness with your back to a tree.

Then, you disturb the stillness of the woods with calls that are supposed to annoy, worry or arouse sexual curiosity in a bear – the last one being the most troubling.

This has caused me to ask the question: do I really want a bear that bad?

And, perhaps because of a sub-par IQ, my answer is still yes.

So, sometime this week, should my bait still produce duds, I'll go out into the woods and call.

I'll do this knowing full well that any bear that actually responds will not be happy (or perhaps too happy) when we finally meet.

The good news is that the bear probably won't be any more agitated than Jenn when I start my 7 a.m. practice sessions. At least she's a good sport.

Even though this might have disturbed her sleep, after she found out I was practising to call bears in, she actually encouraged me to go out and experiment with it.

Like her, I am also curious to see if this call works as advertised.

I can't think of why it shouldn't either.

We hunters routinely call in coyotes, fox, deer, ducks, squirrels, moose, geese and turkeys. Why should bear be any different?

If it does work as well as the website suggests, I'll probably want to look up the inventor and give him my laundry bill or – at the very least – an invoice for new underwear, and perhaps years of psychotherapy.

Probably not, however, as the makers took safety into account.

They say this product can call them in from a half-mile or more – and that gives the caller a very generous head start. In any case, I have been practising very hard and according to their instructional video – religiously, at 7 a.m.

And I will be trying this tactic for real in the field soon.

But I'll also hedge my bets on a bait pile of cookies, bird seed, molasses covered dog food, sardines and bacon grease.

Call it insurance, but if I am going to annoy a bear to that extent, I'd rather have it well fed before it decides to try to catch up with me.

After all, with an agitated bear, a half-mile lead is cutting it fine.

Leaping and slithering

“HOW ARE YOU GUYS DOING?” asked Rose as she walked into view. She had seen the four lads from her cottage window and walked over to where they were half hidden by trees. They tried to look nonchalant, especially the older two who were perhaps 14. A third one looked about 12 and the smallest could not have been more than nine. He was carrying what appeared to be a bait pail of some kind.

Four bikes lay on the ground and two of the boys held fishing rods. The biggest boy was straddling rocks in the stream that emptied into the bay. He obviously had one hand closed on something and Rose figured she knew what. “Catching fishing frogs?” she asked in an interested, friendly voice.

Sharon Lynch
Down our Road

“Yup,” said the boy with a ball cap on his head and confidence in his tone and posture. Rose then asked if there were frogs in the pail and how many. The young one piped up that there were about 17. Without hesitation she asked the boy in the stream if he was catching more and how many did he have in his hand. 15 more.

“That’s a lot of frogs,” she stated, her heart sinking at the thought of so many coming out of one spot when their numbers had been declining steeply over the years. Then she saw something else. The self-assured boy with the cap was holding a small net and there was something in it. “What’s that – a snake?” came her still mildly curious question. It was indeed a small snake. It didn’t appear to be a water snake by its markings though Rose was no expert. “I hope you plan to let it go,” she continued looking at the cap boy.

He avoided her eyes but said he was planning to do just that shortly. So Rose stood there a few minutes, hands on hips and legs apart while she gathered her thoughts. The fellow in the stream continued to move rocks around and add to what had to be a very crowded fist full of frogs.

Then Rose began. She pointed out that they were on private property, her uncle’s in fact, and he would be quite upset if he was present at that moment. The boys looked everywhere but at her. Next she told them that frogs were getting more scarce all the time and that the boy in the stream should let the ones he held go as they already had plenty in the pail. At first he pretended he didn’t hear her and continued moving rocks until she repeated herself. With obvious regret he opened his hand as Rose watched. Then she turned to the one with the net and told him this was probably a good time to let the snake go.

At first he pretended to release it, walking over to some bushes on shore and putting down the net. But Rose had sharp eyes and when he pulled the net back up, partly obscured by his body, it didn’t look empty. So she noted it seemed to still be in the net and then he released it onto the ground. It slipped quickly away.

Now the four young males stood around as though not knowing what to do next. Rose asked if any of them had been fishing off her uncle’s dock the day before. Barely were her words out when there were denials all around. “Well whoever it was,” she explained, “caught fish, cleaned them and then threw newspaper and a plastic bag into the water. I had to pull that out of the lake myself.” Silence.

“You know,” she continued, “we all have to take care of the environment or it’s going to get really messed up. Maybe you should try fishing up by your own place. Where are you from – the trailer park?” Not missing a beat, the youngest answered in the affirmative. The three others again looked at the ground. “So why not try fishing up there, by the dam?” There seemed little enthusiasm for her suggestion. Perhaps they preferred more adventure and distance from the watchful eyes of adults.

After some grass kicking and whispered discussion by their bikes, the four set off in the direction they had to have come. Rose watched them peddle away. One small drop in a very big environmental bucket, she thought, walking back to her cottage.

Take from the poor, give to the rich

To the Editor,

Remember when the Conservative party claimed that cuts to the corporate tax rate were needed to create jobs, but cuts to personal income tax rates needed to wait until the deficit is eliminated?

Well Finance Minister Jim Flaherty is now complaining that corporations are not investing all that money they have been accumulating with Canadian corporate cash reserves expanding some 42 per cent since 2009 to a total of more than $500 billion dollars.

Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney has the answer though as he suggests that corporations give that hoarded tax cut money to their shareholders if they can’t find anything productive to do with it.

There completes what the Conservative party always does best, which is take from the poor and give to the rich.

New condominium diminishes view

To the Editor,

We live opposite the condominium on Highway 118. Our view of the lake is diminished by this council-approved building by about 30 per cent.

People have asked me why we did not complain when the building was proposed.

The answer is that we were told by a representative of the builder that came to our house that our view would hardly be restricted as a greater part of the condominium would be set below the curve of the hill.

Obviously, we should have obtained that assurance in writing.

CARP chapter to launch Sept. 13

Jenn Watt
Editor

The last five months have seemed like a year for Bob Stinson, for all the work he and the steering committee of Haliburton's CARP chapter have put in.

There's been fundraising, co-ordinating, grant applications, outreach and research to pull together the aging-related group representing the county, and it's all about to pay off.

On Sept. 13, chapter 54 of the 660,000-member national advocacy group will be launched at the Haliburton Legion building, welcoming hundreds, Stinson hopes.

There's a sparkle in his eye when the 79-year-old discusses the possibilities of the chapter, which will advocate on issues related to aging, provide benefits like travel insurance to its members and create a social space for like-minded people.

"Dani [Stahle] and I have been on the Aging Well committee. It has no members as such and we don't know how to communicate with seniors around the county," Stinson says.

The Aging Well committee is a small group of area residents who meet to research and discuss seniors' issues, but there is no membership behind it.

CARP, which used to stand for the Canadian Association of Retired People, but has since dropped the "retirement" part, has the power of membership behind it.

It means when the Haliburton chapter weighs in on an issue, it is speaking on behalf of a wide group.

The first step to creating a CARP chapter is to put together a steering committee, which was done in April.

That committee will guide the chapter to its first election, when a board of directors will be chosen – likely in April of 2013.

Stinson, Stahle, Allen Burns, Peter Minaki, Richard Hensen, Frank Thom and Shirley Irene Jones are committee members.

Haliburton CARP has put together a robust schedule for its launch meeting, which is open to the public free of charge.

MP Barry Devolin, MPP Laurie Scott, County Warden Murray Fearrey and OPP acting sergeant Sandy Adams are all scheduled to speak alongside representatives of Sun Life Financial, the McLennan Group Insurance and Chartwell Seniors Housing.

Memberships will be available for $14.95.

Stinson hopes the CARP chapter will bring a needed voice for seniors to the county. In turn, the seniors of this county will be able to inform the larger provincial and national governments, through CARP, of issues affecting them.

The organization is not just for seniors, Stinson points out, with its youngest national member being 21.

Rather, it focuses on issues related to aging – which attracts a majority of senior members.

"Everybody should be interested in it because everybody's aging," Stinson says.

In addition to launching the chapter, the committee has also applied for a New Horizons grant, with the hope of reaching out to the county's smaller communities.

One session proposed by Stinson is a computer literacy course to get more seniors on email.

The CARP Haliburton chapter launch takes place Sept. 13 at the Haliburton Legion starting at 1:30 p.m.

Rural migration study participants wanted

Jenn Watt
Editor

Dr. Fay Martin wants to dig to the core of rural homelessness, poverty, and youth migration.

Through a government grant the Minden resident and researcher is engaging struggling youth – both those that stayed and those that left rural areas – to suss out the causes of their disadvantage.

Martin intends to interview 60 young people before November, compiling their stories for further analysis.

The emphasis is on looking at why young people leave small towns for the cities only to fall on bad luck and end up in precarious situations.

"Very little work has been done on this," says Martin, who pitched the research idea to the federal government.

Human Resources and Skills Development Canada is paying for the study, titled To Go or to Stay?, which will examine rural migration in a holistic fashion.

"There's been very little impetus to explore whether or not [outmigration] is a problem," she says.

Martin, 69, grew up in rural Alberta and remembers well the urge to leave and redefine one's self.

"In a sense, wanting to go away from where everyone knows everything about you," she says.

Youth leave for myriad reasons, but often the choice comes down to employment, education and opportunity.

Cities offer schools and jobs, but pose financial difficulties that urban youth might not face.

Renting a place while doing studies, for example, can cause extra strain on the rural young person.

Martin is looking for other reasons youth leave along with the factors that kept them from success.

In this stage of her research, she is paying $40 to each participant from Haliburton County, Peterborough County or the City of Kawartha Lakes, excluding the towns of Lindsay and Peterborough. Those in the 25 to 30 year range are of most interest.

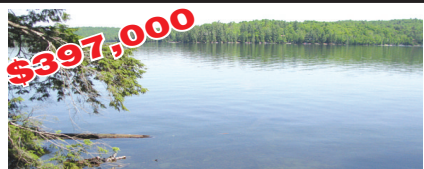

The youth must be at risk of homelessness and have lived rurally for 10 years at

Fire chief sums up fire ban success

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

The following are briefs of a Dysart council meeting on Monday, Aug. 27.

Summer is a busy time in Haliburton, but it was made even busier for Dysart fire chief Miles Maughan because of a 33-day fire ban.

Maughan said they did everything they thought to do in his report for July.

Some people just didn't listen despite advertisements on the radio, posters through town and signage.

Maughan and deputy chief Don Stephenson said renters were part of this problem, as some did not receive the fire ban message from local media. The fire department eventually told landlords to pass on the ban information to renters. They also emailed cottage owners' associations to get the message out. For the first time Twitter was used.

It represents the longest fire ban in Maughan's 21 years as chief. There were two charges laid during the ban. The department responded to eight fires and 14 campfires.

When the department conducted a door-to-door smoke alarm check on July 23 they found 80 per cent compliance. They visited 175 homes (although owners were home in only half of the properties). The balance of homes received a smoke alarm. For places where no one was home the fire department left tags with the department's number for more information.

Secondary buildings such as bunkies were often without smoke alarms, which is just as if not more important than primary residences, Stephenson said.

They visited part of Kennisis, Redstone, Cranberry, Moose, Eagle and Coleman lakes.

Volunteers needed for Colourfest

Colourfest co-ordinator Gail Stelter told council she is in need of help for the Sept. 29 event.

With 21 volunteers, she needs many more.

Councillors pointed out the Minden Hills Bluegrass Festival had 100 volunteers and the Haliburton Art and Craft Festival had 75.

Stelter acknowledged the challenges the streetscape construction would pose, but was not discouraged.

She said if there was heavy machinery on Highland Street she would find the biggest cornstalk to decorate it with.

Cost of applications rises with cost of doing business

The deposit and the administration fee for subdivision and condominium planning applications are going up. These increases are necessary to cover the costs to the municipality for processing planning applications.

The deposit increase will address the increase of fees by the municipality's lawyer.

Until this change, the municipality was not covering costs to process these applications.

Application fee increase will occur with plan of subdivision/condominium, deeming bylaw, severance and site plan agreements and peer review expenses and legal and/or professional advice. See specific costs at haliburton.civicweb.net and follow corresponding prompts for Dysart Council agendas.

Instead of making the increase effective immediately, council said this increase would be effective by its next meeting on Sept. 24.

A gesture of good will

Dysart is donating $500 to the Thunder Bay and Area Disaster Relief Fund.

Flooding after a rainstorm on May 28 caused extensive damage to the area.

Reeve Murray Fearrey said this was a nice gesture and Dysart could very well be in a similar situation.

Donations can be mailed to the Disaster Relief Office at 500 Donald St. E.

All donations will be matched 2:1 by the province.

Special thanks

Haliburton Lake Cottagers and Residents packed the Fort Irwin residents' hall to enjoy a sumptuous breakfast of pancakes, sausages, coffee and juice. # Another season of provocative films

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

A night at the movies for many generations has always been a special occasion.

Despite the onset of home theatre viewing, the people behind Those Other Movies (TOM) keep the wonder of the screen alive for Haliburton with another season of provocative films.

TOM, which is in its seventh season, shows movies over 10 months, from September through June, screening two shows at 4:15 p.m. and 7:15 p.m. at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion in the high school.

It is usually on the second Thursday of the month.

This year's lineup includes Salmon Fishing in the Yemen (Sept. 13), Anonymous (Nov. 8) and The Intouchables (Dec. 13). The October screening has yet to be decided.

The first two movies promise to be light romantic comedies while Anonymous is a historical drama. The remaining movies will be announced later.

"Each season, we sell anywhere from 250 (our highest number) to about 150 season's passes. Many of our season's pass holders have been buying passes since the beginning and have been very supportive over the years," committee member Roberta Coles wrote in an email. "As well as season's pass holders, we also have many people who buy individual movie tickets at the theatre door for each screening."

Movie passes for 10 movies cost $60 and passes are transferable. Tickets at the door are $8. TOM also hosts the annual Haliburton International Film Festival (HIFF). It features a diverse collection of international movies, including industry guests.

Sunday, Nov. 4, will feature the debut of The Land Between at 3:30 p.m. It will end the festival and will be free to the public. This year's lineup includes A Separation, which was this year's best foreign language film winner from Iran; Poetry, from South Korea; Café de Flore, a Canadian film of two intertwined love stories; and Le Havre, a poignant Finnish/French light dramatic comedy about human compassion.

HIFF celebrates its sixth season this year and is scheduled from Nov. 2 to 4.

In October, passes for HIFF will go on sale. A VIP $42 pass gets the holder in all seven feature films, a collection of short films and admission to the gala reception at Hali's Bistro on Saturday. Individual tickets are $8 and available at the door. Gala reception tickets are $10.

Coles said there are six committee members: Carol McLennan, Marci Mandel, Peggy Cassils, Lisa Kerr, Tammy Rea and herself. McLennan, Rea and Coles have been with the project from the beginning. "We started at the Molou Theatre screening 35 millimetre films and then went to the Northern Lights Pavilion where we purchased a projector and other equipment to screen DVDs. We donated this equipment to the Northern Lights Pavilion a few years ago. We also screened films at the newly renovated Beaver Theatre for a few months, before the theatre was closed," Coles said. "Since we have been using the DVD format, we have been donating the DVDs that we have purchased to the Haliburton County Public Library system. We've donated more than 80 DVDs so far." The movies chosen are decided by committee members who attend a couple of film festivals each year to see films before selections are made. This September, Rea and Mandel are going to the Toronto International Film Festival and all six will go to the Cinefest Sudbury International Film Festival in Sudbury at the end of September.

Those Other Movies is a member of TIFF's Film Circuit. The film circuit's mandate is to make quality films more accessible. Their website is tiff.net/filmcircuit/ and ours is www.haliburton-movies.com.

Whitehorse, a duo consisting of Canadian singer-songwriter couple Luke Doucet and Melissa McClelland, will be performing at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion on Sept. 21 as part of the Hike Haliburton Festival. Their music combines elements of rock, country and folk and Doucet is considered by some to among the best guitar players in the country. The show starts at 8 p.m. and tickets are $10 each. They're available at the tourist information centre in Minden, The Photo Shop in Haliburton or by calling 705-286-1777.

Hospice service is about living

Jenn Watt
Editor

In the midst of dying, a focus on living can be an unexpected gift.

Contrary to what you might think, hospice services is about life and learning to be present in the moment, manager of the Haliburton program Marilyn Rydberg says.

"It's about living as fully as you can," she says.

Rydberg is about to head into another training season for her volunteer team through SIRCH Community Services.

Every fall, new recruits are brought together to learn more about supporting people through terminal illness and loss of family members.

The process is rewarding, providing volunteers with life skills and perspective on an event that happens to us all.

"Everybody in this world thinks they're going to live forever," says hospice volunteer Shirley Holmes. "When the doctor says 'you're going to die,' they say, 'no, that can't happen to me.'"

A great deal of emotional, and often spiritual, work has to be done by the individual and his family and loved ones in that time.

Hospice workers are there to help along the way.

One of Holmes's most recent clients was told by the doctor he had two weeks to live.

He was so devastated by the news he sat in his house waiting to die.

"He didn't want to move," Holmes recalls.

The two weeks came and went and he was still alive.

The man ended up living 16 months and in that time, he and his hospice worker became good friends.

Holmes would research current events to chat about on her visits and in turn, her client would think up his own conversation pieces.

"He was ready to talk each week," she says.

When the man eventually passed away, Holmes had to take some time off from volunteering; the relationship she had formed over their months together had become strong and fulfilling.

But the grief she experienced doesn't deter the volunteer from continuing on – she took advantage of SIRCH's resources on bereavement, took some time off and is ready to help out once more.

"Our main purpose is to enjoy and have fun," she says.

While the clients are ill, that doesn't mean they can't be happy in the time they have left.

"It's very, very satisfying to see the [disposition of the] client improve as you're visiting," Holmes says.

Hospice volunteers don't only care for those dying at home, but also the bereaved widows. In addition, a core group of them spend time with patients at Haliburton hospital's palliative care suite.

This additional service, opened in the last year at the site, has increased demand for hospice workers, Rydberg says.

She has 50 volunteers now and hopes for 20 more at this fall's training session.

In particular, people from the Wilberforce and Tory Hill areas are needed.

The most intensive part of volunteering for hospice is the training portion, which is 35 hours starting in October.

New ministry hosting Men's Summit kick-off event

➤ Men of Integrity Ministries launching this month

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

Brian Plouffe has spent the last few months searching his heart and looking to God for the right opportunity.

A pastor at Lakeside Baptist Church for the past 22 years, Plouffe resigned from the church this past winter and since then has been contemplating the next step in his journey.

A husband and father to three daughters, Plouffe, 56, wanted to stay within the Haliburton community and close to daughter Laura, who lives in town.

This past April Plouffe felt it was the right time to launch Men of Integrity Ministries, a non-denominational religious organization focused on reaching out to men in Haliburton County and the surrounding area.

"Even back last fall I had this hunger in my heart to do something with men's ministry, something more than what you can do as a pastor," said Plouffe.

Following a grassroots model, MOI will consist of six foundational teams focused on items such as prayer, family ministry, mentoring and community outreach.

The ministry will partner with Promise Keepers Canada, a North American organization focused on reaching out to men.

"That along with prayer and discernment and talking to local people gave me the green light to move forward," said Plouffe.

On Sept. 21 the ministry will be hosting a Men's Summit in the Great Hall at Fleming College's Haliburton campus.

Angelica Blenich Staff

Brian Plouffe is the founder and ministry coach of Men of Integrity Ministries, based out of Haliburton. The newly formed organization will be launching on Sept. 21 with a Men's Summit, hosted at Fleming College. The evening event will include music, video presentations and testimonials.

of desserts.

Tickets for the event are $10 each and available at Curry Motors in Haliburton and Ridgewood Ford in Minden.

Since MOI is not a church-based initiative, Plouffe chose the neutral location for the summit purposefully.

He is hoping the ministry will challenge men in this community to be the best husbands, fathers and role models they can be.

"There's so much temptation in our society and it's not all sinful temptation. I mean there's 16 different sports channels and if you like sports you could get mesmerized and sit at home every night and some men do."

Plouffe has already garnered the support of men throughout the community, who believe in the principles of the ministry.

"We really are trying to fish for men who have Christian values but maybe they aren't church goers and don't want to become church goers. But when they hear about this they say I like that," said Plouffe.

The ministry will be focused on mentoring and applying values to everyday life and not preaching through words but actions, said Plouffe.

Once established the foundational teams will be meeting through small groups, which will get together regularly, subject to demand.

Details, such as frequency and meeting times, will be ironed out following the kick-off.

"The teams are all structured in a way that you don't need to join anything."

Plouffe believes he will be committing about 15 hours a week to this new initiative and is excited about the future possibilities.

"I believe this model needs to be a relational, grassroots, spirit led model that will be an encouragement and benefit to both the churches and our community as it guides men to be men of integrity in practical ways."

The MOI will be a project of Zechariah 4:6 Ministries, a local organization.

Plouffe is looking at a yearly operating budget of about $60,000 for MOI, which is dependent on sponsorships and donations.

Those interested in supporting the newly launched organization can give online through www.zechariah4v6.com or mail their contribution to Zechariah 4:6 Ministries, 1 Victoria St. #107, Haliburton, Ontario, K0M 1S0.

Donations should be clearly designated for Men of Integrity Ministries.

For more information about MOI or the Men's Summit contact Plouffe at 705-457-1470.

Three musical men to perform in Haliburton

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

They may be called a piano trio, but don't expect dueling pianos onstage at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion.

Triple Forte will be performing the second installment of the 2012 line-up of the Haliburton Concert Series on Sept. 15.

Comprised of violinist Jasper Wood, cellist Yegor Dyachkov and pianist David Jalbert, the trio has been performing together for a number of years and has recently recorded their debut album, titled Triple Forte.

The term piano trio is a musical reference to when a trio includes one piano player, not three, said Wood.

"I can see how that could get confusing," laughed Wood. Originally put together for a concert tour, the group tries to tour a couple of times a year, coinciding with the seasons.

"That's not normal, for somebody to ask you to start a group. They just thought that we'd be a good match," said Wood.

The Haliburton concert will mark the kick-off to Triple Forte's fall tour.

The Highlands will be familiar territory for the trio's musicians, who have all played at the pavilion before, however, not together.

Their upcoming concert will include work by Shostakovich, Ravel and a performance of Beethoven's Piano Trio in B flat major, a piece also known as the Archduke.

"Back when we started up as a trio, nine years ago, it was originally part of our first touring program and we didn't end up doing it. So when we were playing some of these concerts people had heard we were going to be playing the Archduke and they're like 'we just want to hear the Archduke.' It took us this long to get around to finally playing it," said Wood, adding they're excited about performing it.

Apart from being on the road and performing together, each member of the trio is a professor of music at universities across the country and active soloists.

"It gets tough when you're dealing with two other people who have careers already and then their regular gigs," said Wood.

The three musicians, who live in British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec, practice extensively for concerts and professional recordings while on tour.

The constant practice has many benefits, said Wood. "We need to stay in shape [musically] and we want to keep our minds fresh."

Thankfully, the musicians have a cohesive and well-tuned relationship with one another.

"We get along great ... we all have our distinct personalities and our quirks. You don't always know how somebody's going to react to something you say about their playing, as time went on and we toured and got to know each other then it started to really evolve," said Wood.

Anyone wanting tickets for Triple Forte should contact Brenda Robinson at 705-457-2695 or brobinson@interhop.net.

The concert will take place at 7:30 p.m.

Copies of Triple Forte's debut CD will be available for sale following the concert.

County hires website co-ordinator

Haliburton County has hired The Faren Group Inc. to revamp its website.

Councillors accepted a bid from the Vaughan-based company during an Aug. 29 council meeting.

The county will pay $25,700 plus taxes for redevelopment of the website and $600 plus taxes annually for The Faren Group to host the site.

Twelve firms responded to a tender for the job, with a short list of four companies receiving interviews.

"We looked at the work they did and we talked to some of their clients ... and had very favourable responses from them," said county chief administrative officer Jim Wilson.

Wilson, along with Algonquin Highlands Reeve Carol Moffatt, county IT co-ordinator Mike March, multimedia consultant Tammy Rea and county tourism co-ordination Maria Micallef form the steering group for the project.

"The company itself is looking to get more into the tourism sector," Wilson said, adding this made it a good fit for the job.

According to Wilson's report, the steering group believes the company "can take our tourism information and present it in a way that is both new and cutting edge."

A creative director, art director, graphic designer and senior writer from the company with experience levels ranging from eight to 30 years will be working on the project.

"It looks like The Faren Group has fantastic qualifications," said Minden Hills Reeve Barb Reid, who thought the county would be getting an excellent deal for its dollars.

Some of the company's clients include York Region, Noma and public libraries.

Under the contract, the new site is to launch Jan. 7, 2013.

County wants Winterfest encore

Chad Ingram
Staff reporter

Haliburton County is bidding to host the 2015 Ontario Senior Winter Games.

Alan Clark, who was chairman of the Winterfest 2011 Ontario Senior Winter Games hosted in the county, visited upper-tier councillors at their Aug. 29 meeting.

The county had submitted a letter of intent to bid on the games earlier this summer and Clark urged politicians to proceed.

Clark said he's spoken with 15 members of the organizing committee from the 2011 event and while one said it was too early and another was undecided, 13 "enthusiastically endorsed" moving forward.

He'd also been in conversation with Myke Malone, general manager of the 2011 games, who said he'd again let his name stand for the manager's position.

"Myke's enthusiastic about coming back to Haliburton County," Clark said.

Reasons for moving ahead with the bid, he said, including economic impact and community legacy.

Noting that the number of people involved in 55-and-over sports was one the rise, Clark said the area had benefited financially from the 2011 event.

"I think it's unfortunate that the views of a couple of merchants... had tainted in some ways the overall view," he said, adding that the three-day event had sprinkled $500,000 in "new" dollars over the county.

Some members of the county business community had said they'd seen lower-than-expected revenues stemming from Winterfest.

A larger benefit is what hosting such events can do for a community.

"I believe legacy is motion," Clark said. "I don't believe London will be the same city again after the success it had [with the recent summer Olympics]."

He added it was an opportunity to bring tourists to the county outside of the regular summer window and that the county could build on knowledge gained from hosting the 2011 games.

"The focus should be on not whether we can do it... but how we can do it better," Clark said, adding that more promotion of the area and greater inclusion of young people would be items to concentrate on a second time around.

The games would cost $550,000 to host, including $200,000 in provincial grant money, $150,000 in registration fees and another $200,000 in additional grants and sponsorship money.

Clark said he would be looking at larger corporate sponsorships that were a "natural" fit for the games, meaning companies that cater to older clientele.

Dysart et al Reeve and County Warden Murray Fearrey said avoiding going after too much local advertising might be a good idea, since some business owners didn't feel their sponsorships last time had paid off.

"They wondered why they should be involved," he said.

Clark will be compiling the bid, the deadline for which is Oct. 30.

The host community will be announced in February.

Ontario office space up for grabs

Chad Ingram
Staff reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed during an Aug. 29 Haliburton County council meeting.

The county received a letter from the province saying that 2,100 square feet of office space is available for rent in the Ministry of Natural Resources building on Hwy. 35 in Minden.

The county has until Sept. 20 to respond. Noting that there have been rumours about the Minden MNR office shutting down, Minden Hills Reeve Barb Reid requested more information on what part of the building was available.

Walker's property update

Test holes looking at soil quality are being dug at the former Walker's Auto Repair building, which will house a new county EMS base, likely in a joint facility with a new Minden Hills fire hall. Architect Ronald Awde has produced eight conceptual site plans and an engineering report is expected in September. The entrance locations for the facility are expected to be finalized by the Ministry of Transport tation towards the end of the year.

Digging for doctors

Councillors approved chief administrative officer Jim Wilson and human resources director Evelyn Fenwick to oversee a medical student no-interest-in-return-for-service program in consultation with the Haliburton Highlands Family Health Team.

The student loan strategy has been successful in Hastings County.

Rejecting downloading

Municipalities in the province continue to decry the province's move to download water source protection costs to the local level. Water source protection areas were put into place by the province.

"This is the time to band together and say, 'no, we're not doing this,'" said Dysart et al Reeve and County Warden Murray Fearrey.

Highlands East Reeve Dave Burton, who sits on the local water source protection board, said municipalities had been coming together and writing letters in protest, but with no response from the provincial government. Townships would be responsible for monitoring costs, which could include paying staff.

RBC gives back

Beth O'Connor of RBC Dominion Securities, left, presents a $1,000 donation to Debbie Cumber, program manager for Cottage Dreams, a cancer recovery initiative on Aug. 31. The financial contribution marks the fifth consecutive year RBC has given to Cottage Dreams.

Epic journey across nation leaves former Red Hawk humbled

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

Seeing the dramatic Rocky Mountains in the west, the calming Prairies in Saskatchewan, the refreshing lakes, rivers and forests of Ontario, and the buildings of old Quebec and feeling the embrace of its “biker friendly” attitudes has left an indelible impression on a former Red Hawk.

Debbie Ray, who grew up in the Highlands and won the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Athlete of the Year award in 2002-2003, reflected on her cross-country cycling journey to raise money for and awareness of healthy living with husband Carlin Val.

She's discovered life is a lot like biking.

“If you keep your focus on the end goal you will surely make it (no matter how big the obstacles), but if you keep glancing at ditches and pot-holes you are bound to end up making your ride more challenging and less enjoyable,” she said.

Not afraid of adventure, Ray started this 7,000 kilometre trip from Stanley Park in Vancouver on July 5 and plans to be in Halifax some time in September. As of Aug. 28 the couple was in Quebec City.

Ray is riding and raising money through her not-for-profit Cycle 2 Save (www.cycle2save.ca) organization and has held presentations, given speeches and offered education regarding daily activity and how proper nutrition can be a means to prevent chronic disease, mental illness and injury. She hopes to raise $1 for each kilometre.

Her website said the money will be donated to charitable organizations that encourage proper nutrition and provide opportunity for physical activity in our communities.

She said heading out into the unknown can make anyone anxious or doubtful, but believes in going for it.

During her ride, Ray learned a lot about life and herself. Any epic effort and adventure brings “life lessons.”

Ray said they learned to take their time, take every opportunity to help others and the more you put in the more you get out.

There have been personal challenges on this trip.

“I have learned that my mind thinks about giving up long before my body does. If you can keep moving forward it is amazing what you can overcome and how strong you really are,” she said.

The trip was possible, she said, because of support from friends and family, including sponsors Mountain Equipment Co-op, Martin's Bike Shop, Smith Optical, True Organic, Bayshore Broadcasting, and Buff Canada.

Health and regular physical activity is important to Ray.

“It is a great way to reduce stress, to feel good about yourself, to get in-tune with your body. When you work hard to be active you tend to make better food choices as well. When I am active and eating well I have way more energy. I sleep better. I have more patience. I have increased focus. I am a happier person,” she said.

Ray has learned most people want a healthier life.

“I have learned that the majority of people in Canada who we have talked to are ready and willing for a shift in lifestyle. They want to eat more fruits and vegetables and less processed foods – they want more education regarding nutrition, they want the opportunity to be active every day, they want to go off medication and feel in control of their health – they want all the physical and mental benefits and the energy that comes from this change in lifestyle,” she said.

When you cycle for nine hours a day, cook on a camp stove, bathe in rivers and search nightly for a place to pitch a tent, there was an obvious need for new habits.

“We have changed our lifestyle slowly (cycling for more hours a day, ‘bush camping’ more often than designated campsites, eating out less often ...) and it took about 20 days to truly settle into these new routines,” she said. “Of course the challenges that come from a change in any lifestyle depend on the significance of the change. We encourage everyone to make small and simple changes to improve their health – to start is often the hardest part.”

Debbie Ray, left and husband Carlin Val, take a break from their 7,000 kilometre odyssey across Canada in front of the Parliament buildings in Ottawa on Wednesday, Aug. 22. Ray started the not-for-profit Cycle 2 Save (www.cycle2save.ca) organization to raise money and awareness about how a healthy lifestyle can be a preventative method against chronic illness. She hopes to raise $1 for each kilometre. Submitted by Debbie Ray

Kash Dash success owed to its volunteers

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

The biggest winners in the Kash End of Summer Dash race on Aug. 26 weren't even competing.

With 82 runners in the two fields (10 kilometre race and a one kilometre Kids' Run), the annual running race has consistently drawn participation and money for a good cause.

For 15 years, this event has helped East African communities through the work by the Canadian Physicians for Aid and Relief (CPAR).

CPAR is a not-for-profit working towards building healthy communities in East Africa.

They partner with communities helping them access clean water, adequate food, primary health services and a safe and healthy environment.

Dr. Steve Ferracuti, who has organized the event since it started, said the success after all these years is owed to the many volunteers who have given their time and effort.

The 10 kilometre race started and ended at the Wigamog Inn just outside Haliburton.

CPAR executive director Kevin O'Brien addressed the runners before the 10 kilometre run.

Bernie Hogan of Bancroft finished first with a time of 35:05 while Mike Armstrong of Haliburton was the top local finisher in fourth.

Fourteen-year-old Cameron Cira shocked a lot of people finishing third with a time of 38:58.

Top female was Amy McIntyre of Udora with a time of 44:09 while Sue Shikaze of Haliburton was the top local female and finished fourth.

Many benefits to making time for family meals

As families get ready for back to school, a local nutrition expert suggests it is also time for dinner – especially one that's healthy, homemade and enjoyed by everyone.

When families sit down to eat a meal together, there are benefits for everyone sitting around the table, says Laura Danilko, a registered dietitian with the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit. Family meals allow parents and caregivers to be good role models for healthy eating, while helping children learn life-long healthy eating habits. Studies also show children develop higher self-esteem, better mealtime manners, and improved sense of structure and belonging.

"There really is mealtime magic in making the time to eat together as a family," says Danilko. "That's especially true as summer winds down and we head back into the hustle and bustle of fall with the return of school, work and other activities."

Eating together as a family is not without challenges, she admits. With increased demands at school, longer work hours and extracurricular activities, Danilko isn't surprised by research that suggests up to one-third of families do not sit together at mealtimes. In many cases, those who eat together typically do so while watching TV. To reduce distractions, Danilko encourages families to make meals "technology-free zones" where the focus is on the food and each other.

Another way to make family meals more enjoyable is getting everyone involved in creating the meal from menu planning to clean-up. Serving food that everyone likes can also make it more appetizing. "If you are making a meal or trying new foods that you're not sure your kids will like, serve it with a side dish that you know they will eat," Danilko advises.

While the role of parents and caregivers is to provide healthy meal options and act as positive role model in enjoying healthy foods, it should not be to force or bribe children to eat their meals. According to Danilko, this approach is sure to backfire and will just create tension and anxiety around mealtime. "It's better to let children decide if and how much they will eat," she says. "Over time and with some positive reinforcement from parents, children will pick up their healthy habits and be more likely to try new foods and make healthy choices on their own initiative."

For families on the go, it's not always possible to eat together. In these cases, Danilko makes the following suggestions:

- Try to aim for at least three family meals per week.
- Keep meal preparation quick and simple. Plan meals ahead of time and make enough food for two meals rather than one. This way, on busy days, food prep just involves reheating the leftovers.
- Be flexible. If families can't get together for dinner, plan a meal together at breakfast or lunch.
- Be creative. Wherever they are, families can sit together for meal time.
- Get more ideas for family meals by calling the health unit at 1-866-888-4577, ext. 233, or visiting www.hkpr.on.ca.

Toddler's rescue a team effort, Mike Bradley says

Eyston and the family were doing.

"We deal with a lot of people every day and it's one of those calls that anybody who works in the emergency services could deal with any day of the week, but it's very rare we're invited back to people's homes that we deal with for any sort of thing. It was nice to be appreciated in that sense," he said.

Bradley has been an officer for five years. The former Red Hawks football player and Waterloo Warriors star was also a running back/special teams player for the Edmonton Eskimos in the CFL. He won the Grey Cup in 2003 and played in the league for six years.

Bradley's dad, Jim, said his son loves the job despite tough times.

"For a week there when [Eyston] was in the hospital he was pretty down she might not make it, but then when everything turned out well it gave him a nice high to go through that," he said.

"It's just one more step for him. He loved football and the high it presented. And sometimes this job presents similar type highs that are more rewarding than football by a whole lot when you save someone's life."

On a CityTV news report, Bradley shared praise with everyone involved in the call.

"It was definitely a team effort. There was a ton of help. A ton of people acting fast and acting right for the best outcome," he said.

Bradley was at the scene in three minutes from when the call came in. His staff sergeant has put in a recommendation for a citation.

Bradley's likeness is being added to the collection of murals on the side of the Dysart arena.

He'll do his best to not see the mural until it is unveiled at the ceremony scheduled in October.

He believes this support is part of a small town.

"I appreciate it immensely. It's one of those things that speaks volumes about small towns and the support you continue to get even after being removed from football for five or six years."

Janet Bradley couldn't be prouder of her son.

"He's a good kid. What else can I say," she said.

Seeing the girl doing well has helped Bradley.

"It was a little bit tough for me, but now that I know she is going to be OK and she's doing better it makes a lot easier. It gives you some closure," he said.

Constable Mike Bradley, who is well-known in the area as a former Red Hawks football player who made the CFL, recently saved the life of an Oshawa toddler while working earlier this month. He was in Haliburton this past week visiting his parents.

Two Haliburton beaches unfit for swimming

The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit reports the following beach testing results for Haliburton County.

The information is current for the week of Aug. 27 and is based on the most recent test results from the provincial lab in Peterborough for water samples taken from these beaches. Local residents should note:

- Beaches marked as OPEN are considered within acceptable levels as set out in the Ontario government's beach management protocol.

- Beaches marked POSTED indicate bacterial levels in the water are higher than those considered acceptable as set out in the Ontario government's beach management protocol, making them unsafe for bathing.

- Beaches listed as Results Unavailable indicate test results are not yet available. People can call the health unit or visit www.hkpr.on.ca for the most up-to-date results on these beaches.

This is the last week of testing this summer.

Reads of the week

Book of the Week

The Red House by Mark Haddon

If you enjoyed the family drama and unusual narrative of The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time, you'll be interested to know that Mark Haddon has just released a brand new novel. The Red House follows eight members of a dysfunctional family, as they gather at a vacation home in the English countryside. Richard, a wealthy doctor, has just re-married and inherited a willful stepdaughter in the process; Angela, his sister, has a do-nothing husband and three children who seem completely foreign to her. The stage is set for seven days of resentment and guilt, a staple of family gatherings the world over. This quirky and comically intimate read is available in print, e-book and talking book formats at the Haliburton County Public Library.

Junior Book of the Week Junior Non-Fiction Title

Just Being Audrey by Margaret Cardillo

When Audrey Hepburn was a little girl, more than anything she wanted to be a dancer. But all of the other girls in her class made fun of her, saying that she was too tall, and her feet were too big. But this didn't make Audrey quit, instead she worked even harder. When the Second World War began, Audrey and her family had to go into hiding, but fear and hunger did not stop her from dancing or acting. Instead, she put on performances for other refugees, bringing happiness and joy into what was a very dark time. These are only two examples of Audrey Hepburn's determination, giving spirit, and positive nature, which are highlighted in the biographical picture book Just Being Audrey. This is a great book to introduce young readers to Audrey Hepburn's work both in Hollywood, and on humanitarian projects, and is available to reserve from the library today.

Local Celebrity Read

Chris Voth, environmental and property operations manager at the Township of Minden Hills, recently finished Roots by Alex Haley. Voth, who is new to Haliburton County, moving from Oakville with his family last October, was drawn to Roots because he has "always been interested in history."

Roots is the classic family saga that started a genealogy movement among African Americans. Drawing from his own ancestral research, Haley traced his roots back to Kunta Kinte, an African captured while gathering wood and brought to America in 1767. The voyage was grim and Kinte, of course, had trouble adjusting to the alien slave culture, detesting white domination. Vowing to remain faithful to his heritage,

Kinte told his daughter Kizzy about his past, which was since passed down to seventh generation Haley. "Roots is an inspiring story that shows you can overcome anything, from having your foot removed to being taken away from your family," says Voth. "And, after generations of hardship, the family was pretty successful down the road."

LHIN looking for personal suggestions on improving health-care services

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

In an effort to do a better job at providing services, the Central East Local Health Integration Network is looking for suggestions from the public.

Up until Sept. 21, the LHIN is seeking personal stories and experiences to be used during their integration planning process.

The organization is working towards their third Integrated Health Service Plan, starting in April 2013, according to a press release.

"Over the years we have always gone to the community and said 'what's important to you?'" said Katie Cronin-Wood, communications lead for the Central East LHIN.

Previous planning processes have shown the best way to engage local residents is to find out what their stories are, said Cronin-Wood.

The LHIN is looking for both positive and negative experiences.

"What resonated with them. What impressed them when they accessed a health care provider and why. What really frustrated them and what should be done to deal with that frustration," are just some of the questions that will be asked, said Cronin-Wood.

Launching next year, the plan will provide a framework for the next three years, until 2016, with a focus on specific areas including seniors, mental health and addictions, chronic diseases and end of life care.

"We find that as people plan for the next three years they really need the voice of the resident or the voice of the patient or client to support them in their planning," said Cronin-Wood.

Health-care providers such as the palliative care network and mental health and addictions network, will also be partnering with the LHIN in the planning process.

"At the end of the September, after all these stories are collected, we will be going to our board and saying... here's the goal that we're going to strive for over the next three years," said Cronin-Wood.

The IHSP follows previous public-driven plans that saw a reduction in emergency room wait times, along with other improvements in health-care services, according to Cronin-Wood.

To learn more about the plan and complete the survey, visit the LHIN's website at www.centraleastthin.on.ca and click on IHSP-Integrated Health Services Plan.

Those wishing to fill out the survey in paper format can call the organization at 1-866-804-5446 and ask for a copy to be mailed to them.

Surveys will also be available locally by visiting a health services provider, such as the Haliburton or Minden hospital and requesting a survey.

Forms can be mailed or faxed back to the LHIN's office.

The fax number is 905-427-9659, the mailing address is: Harwood Plaza, 314 Harwood Avenue South, Suite 204A, Ajax, ON, L1S 2J1.

Devolin unhappy with possible riding changes

Lisa Gervais
QMI Agency

Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock could be split into two federal ridings if a Federal Electoral Boundaries Commission for Ontario draft proposal now before the general public is accepted.

The town of Lindsay and southeast of Lindsay would become part of a new Kawartha Lakes-Port Hope-Cobourg riding, stretching all the way to Lake Ontario. Meanwhile, the north of the city, including Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon, Minden and Haliburton would join a riding called Haliburton-Uxbridge, geographically centred in Haliburton.

"I don't like it," MP Barry Devolin said last week. "I think cutting the City of Kawartha Lakes in two is a bad idea and that is essentially what it does."

He said he believes there is more in common between Lindsay and Haliburton, for example, than Lindsay and Port Hope or Haliburton and Uxbridge.

Politically, Devolin doesn't think a change would have much of an impact since both new ridings would remain "in a sea of blue."

Devolin worked for years to build relationships and learn about issues in the riding of Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock, so would hate to lose any communities, he said.

However, he said it was a first draft, and "not a done deal" and encouraged the general public to find out about the public consultation process. He urged the commission to consider stability. He said he realizes the status quo is not an option since Ontario must add 15 electoral districts as a result of the increase in its population. However, he assumed the changes would be more minor in nature.

Devolin wants to know "what other scenario or options they have for our area."

MPP Laurie Scott said new federal ridings are a precursor to new provincial ridings. Adding the area "just changed boundaries to match municipal boundaries." She, too, is perplexed by the CKL splitting, saying "it's not fair to split Kawartha Lakes in half." As for Haliburton and Uxbridge being joined "it doesn't make any sense," she said. Like Devolin, Scott hoped for minor tinkering. "I don't want to give up any of my communities. And the communities of interest we have now are quite good. I would hope they would reconsider. We're going to fight it," she said.

The proposed new electoral districts are in Brampton (two), Cambridge, Durham (two), Hamilton, Markham (two), Mississauga (two), Oakville, Ottawa, Simcoe, Toronto (two) and York.

"Population shifts and increases, efforts to honour existing municipal boundaries whenever possible, and the establishment of 15 new electoral districts have required substantial adjustment to Ontario's electoral map," said the Hon. Mr. Justice George Valin, chairman of the three-member commission.

Names are kept confidential and personal circumstances will be obscured to maintain privacy.

For simplicity's sake, the city youth should live in either Peterborough, Lindsay or Toronto.

Once the stories are collected, Martin will take the results to an advisory board, consisting of professionals in the housing, employment, justice and other social services. From that information, they will craft recommendations for practice and policy changes.

Eclectic market wraps up successful inaugural year in Wilberforce

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

The first season of the Wilberforce Eclectic Market can be celebrated as a success.

So much so that one of the vendors was able to use their earnings and take a trip.

"One vendor made enough money for a trip for two to Australia. So that's what we were hoping for, that people would pick up on the opportunity and take advantage of it," said market organizer Mary Barker.

Overseen by Barker, the market started on the May long weekend of this year and wrapped up on the Labour Day weekend.

Held every Saturday and Sunday throughout the summer, the market featured a variety of items for sale, including baked goods, crafts, toys, antiques and artwork.

One booth featured mitts made from recycled fur for sale.

Although the market was never at full capacity, Barker was impressed with the quality of vendors and demonstrators that participated.

"We even had a church service one Sunday, the Anglican church brought their service to the market. They had lemonade and cookies on the lawn afterwards so that was fun and well attended. They said they had more people at the market church than the regular service," she said.

The idea for an eclectic market initially came from Blaine Devouge, who approached Barker about organizing it.

Soon after she was at the helm for its entire duration.

Located next to the Agnew's General Store on Loop Road, the market had at most 22 vendors, with the long-weekends being the busiest in terms of foot traffic and displays, said Barker.

The market also included not-for-profit vendors, who were looking to raise funds for their organization, such as radio station Canoe FM.

Vendors paid a $15 fee for each weekend.

"There were so many positive comments from the community that it seemed like every weekend was a carnival

Angelica Blenich Staff

Bargain hunters look for good deals and great finds at the Wilberforce Eclectic Market on Sept. 2. Wrapping up its first season, the market ran every weekend throughout the summer next to Agnew's General Store on Loop Road.

weekend, because of the market. There were cars lined up on both sides of the street," said Barker.

The organizer is unsure at this point what the future holds for the market, but she is hoping to see it return in 2013.

"We'll see. It will depend on whether the space is still available. I've got lots of plans for next year if we do go ahead with it," she said.

For now the organizer is looking forward to a rest following a busy season.

"It was a really good summer and now I'm awfully tired," laughed Barker.

Adult education move delayed

A move to the old school board office will be put off for six weeks for adult education students due to unexpected delays in renovations, the school board says.

The students were scheduled to move out of the Victoria Street School as of Sept. 4, but that date has shifted to Oct. 22, according to a press release issued by the Trillium Lakelands District School Board.

"Students wishing to register for September Block 1 classes at the Haliburton AETC [Adult Education and Training Centre] are to go to the current location at 73 Victoria Street," the release says.

New sign

Finding Haliburton's Industrial Park is easier now after a new sign was installed on County Road 21. There are 23 businesses in the Industrial Park, on the west side of town. Lise Ainsley, owner of Ainsley's Cottage Decor and Gifts, co-ordinated installation of the sign. She said she was grateful to the county for allowing the sign to be installed.

Mulholland family celebrates newest addition

West Guilford

Eleanor Cooper

754-2278

Congratulations to Sherry and Bill Mulholland on becoming grandparents to Hunter Craig Russell Neville, son of Heather Mulholland and Cameron Neville.

Aug. 27, 2012 was the date when Hunter was born at Soldiers Memorial Hospital in Orillia and he weighed in at six pounds, four ounces.

Bill and Freda Davis are great-grandparents and Carl Dugan great-grandfather, making this a fifth generation family.

Jean (Warder) and Brian Neville are also happy grandparents, so congratulations to all concerned.

Cathy McIlmurray and I were part of the 30 or so Canoe FM volunteers who gathered at That Place in Carnarvon on Aug. 30 to honour Joan Cameron upon her retirement from 12 years' service at Canoe FM, hosting two regular programs per week all that time.

Accolades and gifts, flowers and good wishes were expressions of the high regard in which we hold this gracious lady of radio experience, who along with her husband, Don, was in it from its inception.

Many are the thanks and many the fond memories as Joan leaves her mark before a well-earned retirement.

Congratulations to Rebekah Wrightman, daughter of Charlene English and

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING AND NOTICE OF COMPLETE APPLICATION PROPOSED OFFICIAL PLAN AMENDMENT PROPOSED ZONING BY-LAW AMENDMENT PROPOSED PLAN OF SUBDIVISION

- DATE: Monday October 1st, 2012
- TIME: 5:00 pm
- LOCATION: Council Chambers in the Municipal Office
135 Maple Ave., Haliburton, Ontario

APPLICATIONS:

1. Lands of Gonnens:

- Purpose and Effect:
  - (i) Application to amend the Official Plan: the proposed amendment will apply to Lots 1 to 5 inclusive on draft Plan of Subdivision 46T-12001. It will change the designation on the subject lands from the Resort Commercial Areas designation to the Waterfront Areas designation. A site specific exemption will apply to Lots 3 and 4 to recognize that these lots do not comply with the required frontage and area criteria for an "area of use limitation".
  - (ii) Application to amend the Zoning By-law:
    - Lot 1 and 2 Zone change from "CT" and "EP" to "WR3", "WR3-x" and "EP". Site specific zone provisions will apply.
    - Lot 3 and 4: Zone change from "CT" to "WR5L-x" and "WR5L-xx". Site specific zone provisions will apply.
    - Lot 5: Zone change from "CT" to "WR6L-x". Site specific zone provisions will apply.
    - Lot 6: no change.
  - (iii) Application for Subdivision (file 46T-12001): the proposed plan of subdivision will create 6 lots. Five Lots will be used for waterfront residential purposes. The sixth lot is the remnant land and is part of the former Drag Lake Lodge. It will continue to be used for tourist commercial purposes.
- Location: Part of Lot 33, Concession 6, geographic Township of Dysart (Fred Jones Road) and Part of Lot 1, Concession 6, geographic Township of Dudley (Murray's Road).

2. Lands of Harburn Holdings Ltd.:

- Purpose and Effect: the proposed by-law will change the zone on the subject lands to recognize the proposed waterfront residential use. The existing EP and LR are not changed by this proposal. Site specific zone provisions will protect the existing portage.
  - Zone change to "WR5L-2", "WR6L-3", "WR3L", "WR6L-4", "LR" and "EP".
- This application is a condition of subdivision file 46T-07001 and application for consent-H-013/12.
- Location: Part Lots 6, 7 and 8, Concession 11 and Part Lot 6, Concession 12, Township of Guilford (Lipsy Lake, South Lipsy Lake Road).

3. Lands of Dennis Debler Well Drilling Ltd.:

- Purpose and Effect: the proposed by-law will change the zone on the subject lands to recognize the proposed rural residential use.
  - Zone change from "RU1L" to "RR-10".
- This application is a condition of application for consent-H-020/12.
- Location: Part Lots 2 and 3, Concession 1, Township of Dysart (County Road 1 – Gelert Road).

ANY PERSON OR PUBLIC BODY may attend the Public Meeting and/or make written or verbal representations either in support of or in opposition to the proposed official plan amendment or the proposed by-law amendment.

IF YOU WISH TO BE NOTIFIED of the adoption of the proposed official plan amendment, or of the refusal of a request to amend the official plan, you must make a written request to the Municipality of Dysart et al, P.O. Box 389, Haliburton, Ontario K0M 1S0.

IF YOU WISH TO BE NOTIFIED of the decision of the County of Haliburton with respect to the proposed plan of subdivision, you must make a written request to the Planning Department, County of Haliburton, P.O. Box 399, 11 Newcastle Street Minden, Ontario K0M 2K0.

APPEAL PROVISIONS WITH RESPECT TO THE PROPOSED OFFICIAL PLAN AMENDMENT:

- If a person or public body does not make oral submissions at a public meeting or make written submissions to the Municipality of Dysart et al before the proposed official plan amendment is adopted, the person or public body is not entitled to appeal the decision of the County of Haliburton (who are the approval authority) to the Ontario Municipal Board.
- If a person or public body does not make oral submissions at a public meeting or make written submissions to the Municipality of Dysart et al before the proposed official plan amendment is adopted, the person or public body may not be added as a party to the hearing of an appeal before the Ontario Municipal Board unless, in the opinion of the Board, there are reasonable grounds to do so.

APPEAL PROVISIONS WITH RESPECT TO THE PROPOSED ZONING BY-LAW AMENDMENT:

- If a person or public body does not make oral submissions at a public meeting or make written submissions to the Municipality of Dysart et al before the proposed zoning by-law is passed, the person or public body is not entitled to appeal the decision of the Municipality of Dysart et al to the Ontario Municipal Board.
- If a person or public body does not make oral submissions at a public meeting or make written submissions to the Municipality of Dysart et al before the proposed zoning by-law is passed, the person or public body may not be added as a party to the hearing of an appeal before the Ontario Municipal Board unless, in the opinion of the Board, there are reasonable grounds to do so.

APPEAL PROVISIONS WITH RESPECT TO THE PROPOSED PLAN OF SUBDIVISION:

- If a person or public body does not make oral submissions at a public meeting or make written submissions to the County of Haliburton in respect of the proposed plan of subdivision before the approval authority gives or refuses to give approval to the draft plan of subdivision, the person or public body is not entitled to appeal the decision of the County of Haliburton to the Ontario Municipal Board.
- If a person or public body does not make oral submissions at a public meeting or make written submissions to the County of Haliburton in respect of the proposed plan of subdivision before the approval authority gives or refuses to give approval to the draft plan of subdivision, the person or public body may not be added as a party to the hearing of an appeal before the Ontario Municipal Board unless, in the opinion of the Board, there are reasonable grounds to do so.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION relating to the proposed official plan amendment and the proposed zoning by-law amendment is available for review by appointment at the Planning Department at the Dysart Municipal Office during regular office hours (8:30 A.M. - 4:30 P.M., Monday to Friday).

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION relating to the proposed subdivision is available for review by appointment at the Planning Department at the County of Haliburton during regular office hours (8:30 A.M. - 4:30 P.M., Monday to Friday).

Dated at the Township of Dysart, this 4th day of September, 2012.

Melissa Cooper named grand worthy advisor

Steve Wrightman, on winning one of the five youth bursary scholarships presented at St. George's Anglican Church on Sunday, Aug. 26.

Becca's courses begin at Georgian College in Barrie where she will be pursuing marketing communications and advertising. Our good wishes go with her.

Our granddaughter, Melissa Cooper, daughter of George and Shireen Cooper, was invested as grand worthy advisor, a two-year position in the International Order of Rainbows for Girls, on Aug. 18 in Burlington, Ont.

Three years ago we also saw her older sister, Daphne, receive this same honour, the highest position in IORG in Canada. Great is the pride of parents, grandparents and extended families!

Martin and Vicki Sisson with family, Alex and Mary, drove to Edmonton Aug. 18 to see Alex enrolled in the two-year teachers' college course at the University of Edmonton.

While there, they visited Vicki's sister and several cousins. Alex's background has encompassed the teaching of English as a second language in Korea and Japan as well as assistant in a Montessori school.

It would be great to hear from other parents or grandparents about where and what former Guilford people are doing in the world beyond Haliburton.

Euchre scores for Aug. 28

High – Liz Jesseman and Ivan Kernohan

Low – Myra Marshall and George Milne

Most lone hands – Roslyn Kocot and Bill Marshall
